

CropLife Foundation at Virginia Tech

On April 24, CropLife Foundation consultant, Leonard Gianessi travelled to Blacksburg, VA where he presented his talk on Feeding the World at a meeting of Virginia Tech's Agronomy Club. Leonard's presentation to the Club was organized by former CLA summer intern Peter Bachman. In addition to the student members of the Club, Leonard's presentation was also attended by Peter's favorite professor, Ozzie Abaye, who has worked extensively on projects in Africa and who fully agrees with Leonard's analysis of the need for herbicides for smallholder African farmers.

Leonard with Peter Bachman and Ozzie Abaye.

Leonard and Peter and Agronomy Club members.