

Gianessi Winds Up 2013 Speaking to Three Large Audiences

CLF consultant Leonard Gianessi presented his talk on the worldwide benefits of pesticides to 34 audiences in 2013. He wound up the year with three presentations in recent weeks. On December 10, Leonard spoke in the general session of the 47th Annual National Agricultural Aviation Association (NAAA) Convention in Reno, NV. The session was sponsored by Syngenta, ACRC and AIG. The session had 300 attendees and was moderated by the consultant Steve Powell who led the audience through a discussion of “Earning a Skeptical Public’s Trust.”

Leonard speaking at NAAA

Leonard with Andrew Moore (NAAA), Steve Powell (moderator) and Dana Ness (NAAA President)

On December 12, Leonard presented his benefits talk to 200 medical and environmental science professionals in Durham, NC as part of the 10th “One Medicine” Symposium which focused on “Pesticides from All Sides” sponsored by the NC Department of Agriculture and the NC Department of Health and Human Services. Also speaking at the Symposium on “the Future of Pesticides” was Dana Sargent, VP for Regulatory Affairs, Bayer CropScience. The presentations from the Symposium are available on the website: www.OneMedicineNC.org

On December 16, Leonard presented his talk in Greensboro, NC to 90 Syngenta employees in an event organized by Janis McFarland. During the day, Leonard was able to attend the retirement party of long-time friend, Beth Carroll.

Leonard Speaking at the One Medicine Symposium

Leonard speaking at Syngenta

Leonard with Janis McFarland