

CropLife Foundation Presents Talk at Rachel Carson's Church

On December 8, CropLife Foundation consultant Leonard Gianessi presented his talk The Consumer Is Always Right and That's Why Farmers Use Pesticides for the Monday morning Science and Religion Discussion Group meeting at Cedar Lane Unitarian Church in Bethesda, Maryland. One of the attendees recalled that Rachel Carson attended the Church when she lived in Silver Spring and wrote Silent Spring. Leonard's presentation was followed by a spirited one hour discussion with the group regarding pesticide benefits, risks and regulation.

Leonard presenting at the Unitarian Church.